Feel the Power

OUR STORY

Laborers' Local 773 is as diverse as the working men and women who come to embody its most cherished principles of strength, pride and justice. Local 773 was born during a time of conflicts and restraints of the American worker as industries flourished, union members struggled against unsafe working conditions and unfair wages. But in spite of the hardships, Laborers' Local 773 would rise from its most humble beginnings to one of the largest, most diverse and influential Locals in the International.

Local 773 Union Laborers' Cairo, Illinois

On March 11th, 1940, Connell F. Smith was given the charter for Laborers' Local 773 in Cairo, Illinois. And by the 1970's and early 1980's Local 773 extended our representation to workers of public and private industries including employees of government and municipal work, healthcare, railroad maintenance, bus drivers, food service, universities, printers, industrial employees, administrative, and school employees.

Connell F. Smith served as Business Manager and Secretary Treasurer of Laborers' Local 773 from 1940 to 1976. It was his vision that guides Local 773 to this day in organizing, political action and service to the membership. He provided a strong foundation for one of the most respected Local Unions in the entire International Union. His philosophy of "Who can I help today" guided him as the longest serving business manager in Local 773 history. Mr. Smith is best remembered for the deep, abiding respect he had, not only for the hard working union members he represented, but for all working people.

As the turn of the century dawned, the need for more uniform cooperation between the local unions emerged. Local 1274 in Springfield, Illinois merged with Local 773 making it the only Local union in LIUNA to represent members of the railroad construction maintenance. By 2003, eight more LIUNA Locals across Southern Illinois joined Local 773 making it one of the most diverse, extensive and powerful Locals in the International and creating new opportunities for its members. Laborers' Local 773 is now the 12th largest Local Union in the International providing service to our members for over 80 years.
